

ARMY INTELLIGENCE.

Lieutenant Colonel Thomas Duncan, fifth cavalry, has been ordered to join his regiment in the Department of the Pacific.

Assistant Quartermaster General Rufus Ingalls is relieved from duty as Chief Quartermaster of the Military Division of the Atlantic, and will remain in charge of the general depot at New York, performing the duties of Chief Quartermaster's deputy.

Quartermaster General Stewart Van Vleet, on completion of his duties at the depot at Baltimore, will take charge of the depot at Philadelphia and Schuylkill.

The President has ordered Captain James Thompson, Second Artillery, before the Court-Martial at St. Louis, and Colonel John C. Robinson, Forty-third Infantry, before the Court-Martial at New York for insubordination.

Colonel John Dimmick is retired, and Captain D. N. Floger, of the Ordnance Department, is ordered to testify before the D. or Court of Inquiry.

NAVAL INTELLIGENCE.

With all the navy yards undergoing reorganization, the earnest spirit of inquiry and healthy tone of action which pervade it is satisfactory to see naval officers taking under the new regime the most active interest in the equipment of our war vessels. At last they feel the navy is no longer a bureau ridden, and on every side you hear discussions of how to equip, rig and equip all classes of vessels, what kind of propellers to use, their relative merits; and all this takes place from the spirit contagious from the action of Secretary Bore and Admiral Porter.

The Sabine, sitting out at the New York Navy Yard, is to have an increase in calibre of her battery. Upon the main deck she will carry twenty-four or thirty 9-inch Dahlgren guns, and upon the spar deck the new modelled 32-pounders; also two pivot guns, 60-pounders. She equips as a school ship, and will take the graduating class of midshipmen upon a cruise; returning, will then take another class for instruction. Commander John H. Walker has been assigned to command. She is expected to sail from the United States by the 15th of June.

The Navy Department have ordered the Junata to sail with dispatch for service in the West India Squadron. She is a second class vessel of 1,300 tons, and will mount a heavy battery of eleven and nine inch guns. The screw of the Junata can be hoisted out of the water; she possesses the requirements of a sailing vessel, and doubtless she will prove an economical cruiser. In naval circles it is rumored that Captain K. T. Nichols is to be ordered to command her. This officer is one of those recently promoted upon the list of captains for gallant services during the war.

The United States steamer Seminole is rapidly completing for service at Boston Navy Yard and will proceed to the West Indies upon completion. Here we have an effective school-ship with a heavy battery of eleven and eight inch guns and with ability to keep the sea without unnecessary expenditure of coal. Commander E. K. Owens will command her. She is over 800 tons and bark rigged.

The United States sloop-of-war Galena, at Portsmouth, is well forward for commissioning, and it was ordered to take place upon the 10th inst. The vessel was originally built for an iron-clad and used for service during the war. Her plating proving defective after a fight in which Captain John Rodgers commanded her, it was removed and she became an effective school-ship with comfortable quarters and good stowage facilities. She will have a heavy battery and prove a very serviceable vessel. Commander A. W. Johnson will command her; he has lately been on duty at the Naval Observatory, and is an officer of an attainments in and out of his profession. Commander Johnson will, it is reported, be appointed chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

A board consisting of Rear Admirals Stringer, Lardner and Commodore Lee are to ascertain the present condition of all our navy yards and what is wanted to render them efficient in time of war. These are the duties of the board, and they will be the care, preservation and proper disposition of public property, simplification of their organization, reduction of expense, and the very lowest point for its proper administration, what employers can be dispensed with, what public property should be sold, what engines are stored at navy yards, and what are suitable for use, and what are unsuitable. Rear Admiral Goodenough, associated with Commodore Rogers, and assisted by the chief engineers, are to order the construction of all marine engines in our war vessels and report efficiency, and alterations required to make them so. The Washington class will doubtless be first considered. These are assisted by reliable American mechanics, and also by a class long ago tried and pronounced failures by the best constructors of the world. Lieutenants fasten them upon the United States Navy, and the chief engineers are to be the most efficient, irrespective of the fact that in the most ordinary case they would be destroyed and, perhaps, the loss of the vessel would be the result. They cannot be handled under sail; they will not stow over eight days' coal and live weeks' provisions, and all save the Washingtons are built of white oak and other lumber and pronounced trustworthy. They are they have been commissioned, of which fact see the Announcements.

The board of officers who examined into the chief engineers of the navy of any ability in their profession have already declared these engines built upon false principles, giving results under trial of actual service very far from those of any class nation's steamers of similar size and power.

What has been done with tens of thousands of tons of coal burned for the purpose of proving the possibilities in steam? And millions have been expended to purchase and continue the radical defects in steam engineering by piling up twenty-five companies of marine engines, which we have to look the ships built to place them in.

The board, upon which we find Commodore Stringer, Captain Lardner and Commodore Lee, are to decide what is required for the most efficient equipment, management and economical retaining of our fleet of war vessels. The board will be saved at the cost of $500,000 per annum. It is well worthy of consideration what vessels afloat in commission we have that can be managed by half a dozen men, and what are the requirements of the future. The board will be saved at the cost of $500,000 per annum. It is well worthy of consideration what vessels afloat in commission we have that can be managed by half a dozen men, and what are the requirements of the future.

The board, consisting of Commodore Hitchcock, Greene and Hunt, have the consideration of ordnance, a department of the navy which has made the best use of the rapid advances in late war. And we believe the chief of the bureau moved in the right direction. The day for the 32-pounders has passed away. Our smooth bore guns should be 10, 12, 14, 16 and 18 inch, and our smooth bore guns should be 20, 24, 28, 30, 32, 36 and 40-pounders. All the ship's guns should be of the same calibre, and the same calibre, with centre fire cartridge, and both of same calibre, with reduction in weight of bullet and charge of powder. Where is our boasted torpedo system? It faces every want of proper application.

Rear Admiral Joseph Latham has received preparatory orders to command the South Atlantic Squadron.

Lieutenant Commander James O'Kane has been ordered to temporary duty as a member of the Board of Examiners at Washington.

Lieutenant D. C. Woodard has been ordered to St. Yacinto, and James H. Conner, Assistant Surgeon John J. Gibson has been ordered to the Seminole.

Commander Oscar P. Stanton has been detached from the command of the Purveyor and placed on waiting orders.

Commander W. D. Whiting has been detached from the New York Navy Yard and ordered to the command of the Saratoga, relieving J. H. Upshur, who was ordered.

Commander James H. Gills has been detached from the command of the Washington Navy Yard and placed on waiting orders.

Master J. M. Forsythe and G. F. Wilkins, Ensigns M. G. May and James H. Conner, Assistant Surgeon John J. Gibson has been ordered to the Seminole.

Commander Oscar P. Stanton has been detached from the command of the Purveyor and placed on waiting orders.

Master J. M. Forsythe and G. F. Wilkins, Ensigns M. G. May and James H. Conner, Assistant Surgeon John J. Gibson has been ordered to the Seminole.

Commander Oscar P. Stanton has been detached from the command of the Purveyor and placed on waiting orders.

Master J. M. Forsythe and G. F. Wilkins, Ensigns M. G. May and James H. Conner, Assistant Surgeon John J. Gibson has been ordered to the Seminole.

are retained as a recompense for long service on the "home station" and three roundmen. The police are under the general charge and supervision of the executive officer of the navy yard, Mr. Vaughn, the keeper at the main entrance from York street, is well known to the visitors at this station, having held the position for twenty years. The pay of the captain per drum is four dollars, roundmen three dollars, and roundmen two dollars and ten cents.

The uniforms are neat and handsome, and consist of a blue cloth coat, navy regulation cloth cap, and blue pants. They are armed with a club during the day, and a revolver at night.

The marine guard is sent to the Navy Yard each morning from barracks in Flushing avenue.

Visiting days on board the receiving ship are Tuesday and Friday, and respectable people desirous of seeing the Navy Yard are admitted between the hours of nine A. M. and four P. M. daily. The officers are in the command of the Navy Yard, and the office in the Lyceum, which are collected at the gate on leaving the yard. Conversation with workmen during working hours is disallowed.

CONGRESSIONAL LEGISLATION ON UNITED STATES COURTS.

[From the Washington Intelligencer, April 12.]

There has been no publication as to whether or not the bill for the reorganization of the United States Judiciary has been signed by the President. There is some inquiry on the point, but it is not known that it has been signed and is at the State Department.

It provides for one more justice of the Supreme Court, and that upon the resignation of any justice, after he has reached the age of seventy, and has served ten years; he will continue to receive his salary during life.

The most important provision of the bill is that which provides for the appointment of nine circuit judges, who are to sit in the district courts in the trial of cases.

They are to be reinforced in their duties once in two years in the district court by the United States Supreme Judge belonging to their circuit. It is understood that the duty of the latter in the regard to the circuit judges, and that there will be no unduly labor on their part in the courts below, except in some extraordinary case where great weight of judicial character would be particularly appropriate, if not necessary.

In fact the new system gives freedom from excessive and unbecoming laboriousness to the judges of the Supreme Court, who will thereby be enabled to hold two terms in banco at Washington each year—one in spring and another in autumn.

It is not right in principle that the judge in the court below shall sit in the court above, and take part in determining upon his own decision upon appeal to the full bench. We doubt if the system exists in any country but our own.

The circuit judges are not to be appointed until after the 1st of November next. The object of Congress is to give the judges time to give to the legal profession to make known their views and claims concerning appointments, to the end that they may be able, experienced and learned men in the law, such as we are glad to say, now adorn the bench of the district courts in many States, and who it is to be hoped will be advanced to the place of circuit judges. As corruption now stalks unobscured in the high places of public life there is the utmost need of a pure and able judiciary, and General Grant will ingratiate himself with the people by presiding through the thought that empty popularity shall be for a moment regarded as a credential for the judicial position.
